Scientists Discover Ground-breaking Treatment That May Cure Hangovers

Scientists Have Genetically Engineered A Probiotic That Makes You Recover From Alcohol Faster

By Jim Leffman via SWNS

A yogurt or pill taken before a night out could prevent a hangover and protect your liver from the ravages of booze.

Scientists have genetically engineered a probiotic to express an enzyme that makes you recover from alcohol more quickly with fewer associated health problems.

The team from the Chinese Academy of Science’s Institute of Zoology used the enzyme ADH1B which accelerates the breakdown of alcohol in the body.

In experiments on mice, they found that administering the probiotic that expresses the enzyme reduced alcohol absorption, prolonged alcohol tolerance, and shortened the animals’ recovery time after exposure to alcohol.

Hangovers aside, drinking alcohol has been linked to health problems in the human body, including heart disease, cirrhosis, and immune deficiency.

Although obviously drinking less would be better all around, the team said the research could lead to treatments for liver and intestinal disease.

The human body primarily uses forms of an enzyme called alcohol dehydrogenase, or ADH, to break down alcohol.

The study, published in the journal Microbiology Spectrum, says that the enzyme ADH1B, found primarily in East Asian and Polynesian populations, is 100 times more active than other variants.

Dr. Meng Dong and her colleagues looked for a safe delivery method, focusing on the probiotic Lactococcus lactis, a bacterium often used in fermentation.

They used molecular cloning to introduce the gene for human ADH1B into a bacterial plasmid, which was then introduced into a strain of L. lactis which secreted the enzyme.

They made it resistant to stomach acid, then tested it on three groups of five mice, each exposed to different levels of alcohol.

Mice with no treatment became drunk within 20 minutes and when put on their backs couldn’t turn themselves over.

But in the group that received the probiotic, half the mice were still able to turn themselves over an hour after alcohol exposure and a quarter never lost their ability to turn themselves over.

Further tests showed that two hours after exposure, blood alcohol levels in the control group continued to rise, while those in the probiotic-treated mice had begun to fall.

The researchers also found that treated mice showed lower levels of lipids and triglycerides in their livers, suggesting that the probiotic could alleviate alcohol-related damage to that organ.

Although the probiotic hasn’t yet been tested on humans it could present a new way to reduce alcohol-induced health problems, and liver problems in general.

Dr. Dong said: “We believe that genetically engineered probiotics will provide new ideas for the treatment of liver diseases.

“We are excited about the improvement of recombinant probiotics in acute alcohol-induced liver and intestinal damage.”

Heritage Center Service Clubs Exhibit Opens to Public April 22

“Centuries of Service: A Salute to Slate Belt Service Clubs” opens to the public Saturday, April 22, from 12 – 3 pm at the Slate Belt Heritage Center.

Service is people helping people without any expectation of reward. The new show follows the growth of service clubs, from the mutual benefit societies that only aided members, to the 20th century clubs that gave men, women, boys, and girls a voice and promoted good citizenship, to today’s national organizations that are open to all.

You’ll discover why people formed these clubs, get a glimpse into some of the “secret” early rituals, and connect their causes and mission to the community. From the Knights of the Golden Eagle to the Weona Park Pals, all worked (and played) to serve the Slate Belt.

You can also enjoy refreshed exhibits that feature early Slate Belt History, from the Lenape to the European settlers like the Beck family, to the waves of European immigrants that found employment in the slate, textile and garment industries. The fire-fighting exhibit features antique apparatus from the Slate Belt’s golden industrial age.

This year they collaborate with the Quarry Hoist Group and Totts Gap Art Institute, which will dedicate the new pavilion for the S. Flory Manufacturing Company Hoist in Bethel Park next door the heritage Center on North First St..

The dedication ceremony starts at 11 am and demonstrations will continue through the afternoon. The Heritage Center (adjacent to Bethel Park) will open from 12 - 3, serve light snacks, and have special displays of Flory Manufacturing material. You’ll be able to view a continuous slide show that highlights the life of the hoist from the quarry to its new home.

The Heritage Center will also unveil the new outdoor signage sponsored by a Northampton County Department of Community and Economic Development Hotel Tax Grant. The NPS standard display signs bring Slate Belt history out of the museum and into downtown Bangor.

The Slate Belt Heritage Center is located in the 1907 Town Hall building at 30 North First Street, Bangor, PA. Founded in 1999, the Center is a not-for-profit- 501 (c) 3 that collects, preserves, interprets and makes public the history, ethnic traditions and industrial heritage of the area. SBHC is open Saturdays and Sundays, noon to 3 PM from mid-April through October and Sundays, November through March, noon - 3PM. Tours and research time can be scheduled by appointment.

Check their Facebook page at Slatebeltheritagecenter-SBHC for program times, events and other news. Contact SBHC at 610-599-4993 or sbhc@frontier.com for further information.

Procession of The Cross

The Procession of the Cross in Bangor, a nearly 30-year tradition, was held on Good Friday in Bangor. The Procession began at the First United Methodist Church on North Third Street, proceeded to the First U.E and the Baptist Churches on Second Street, and then to the Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church at Fourth Street and Broadway.

A photograph of a female athlete, Julia Pinter, in the middle of a javelin throw. She is wearing a maroon and white athletic singlet with "SLATERS" printed on it, black shorts, and white sneakers. She is in a dynamic pose, leaning forward with her right arm extended holding the javelin and her left arm back. In the background, two other athletes in dark blue singlets are watching. A yellow school bus is parked behind a chain-link fence. The scene is outdoors on a grassy field with red boundary lines.
