Skin Cancer Vaccine May Slash Risk Of Death Or Relapse: Study

By Mark Waghorn via SWNS

A personalized skin cancer vaccine has almost halved the risk of death or relapse in melanoma patients.

Adding the jab immunotherapy drugs reduced the likelihood of recurrence of the deadliest form of the disease by 44 percent.

Senior Investigator Professor Jeffrey Weber, of New York University, said: “Our phase 2b study shows that a neoantigen mRNA vaccine, when used in combination with pembrolizumab, resulted in prolonged time without recurrence or death compared with pembrolizumab alone.”

The trial involved men and women who had surgery to remove melanoma from lymph nodes or other organs and were at high risk of the disease returning in sites distant from the original cancer.

Among 107 participants injected with experimental vaccine mRNA-4157/V940 and immunotherapy pembrolizumab, cancer returned in 24 (22.4%) within two years.

This is compared with 20 out of 50 (40%) who received only pembrolizumab.

About 7,990 people are expected to die of melanoma in the USA in 2023, according to The American Cancer Society’s estimates.

These results presented at a meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research in Orlando provide preliminary reassurance.

Larger studies will be needed to confirm the findings. Phase 3 trials of the combination are already being planned in New York and globally.

In February, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration granted

Breakthrough Therapy Designation to mRNA-4157/V940 in combination with pembrolizumab, a designation designed to speed government reviews of trial results.

It triggers immune system T cells to attack tumors. To spare normal cells, the system uses “checkpoint” molecules on T cell surfaces to turn off their attack against viruses when they clear an infection.

The body may recognize tumors as abnormal, but cancer cells hijack checkpoints to turn off, evade and avoid immune responses.

Immunotherapies like pembrolizumab seek to block checkpoints, making cancer cells more “visible” and vulnerable again to immune cells.

Immunotherapies have become the mainstay for treating melanoma. But they do not work for all patients because melanoma cells, known for their ability to evade the immune system, can become resistant to immunotherapy.

For this reason, researchers have looked at adding vaccines. While most vaccines used today are designed to prevent infections, they can also be tailored to target proteins involved in cancer.

Like the COVID-19 vaccine, mRNA-4157/V940 is based on messenger RNA, a chemical cousin of DNA that provides instructions to cells for making proteins.

It is designed to teach the body’s immune system to recognize cancer cells as different from normal cells. In designing a vaccine against melanoma, researchers attempted to trigger an immune response to specific abnormal proteins, called ‘neoantigens,’ made by cancer cells.

The study volunteers all had their tumors removed. Researchers were able to analyze their cells for neoantigens that were specific to each melanoma and create a ‘personalized’ vaccine for each patient.

As a result, T cells were produced specifically for the neoantigen proteins encoded by the mRNA. Those T cells could then attack any melanoma cells trying to grow or spread.

The vaccine took about six to eight weeks to develop for each patient and could recognize as many as 34 neoantigens.

Severe side effects were similar between the two arms of the study, they said, with fatigue being the most common side effect specific to the vaccine reported by patients.

About 1.3 million Americans are currently diagnosed with melanomas. Scientists predict skin cancer will become the second most common type of cancer in the U.S. by 2040.

Heritage Center Service Clubs Exhibit Opens to Public April 22

“Centuries of Service: A Salute to Slate Belt Service Clubs” opens to the public Saturday, April 22, from 12 – 3 pm at the Slate Belt Heritage Center.

Service is people helping people without any expectation of reward. The new show follows the growth of service clubs, from the mutual benefit societies that only aided members, to the 20th century clubs that gave men, women, boys, and girls a voice and promoted good citizenship, to today’s national organizations that are open to all.

You’ll discover why people formed these clubs, get a glimpse into some of the “secret” early rituals, and connect their causes and mission to the community. From the Knights of the Golden Eagle to the Weona Park Pals, all worked (and played) to serve the Slate Belt.

You can also enjoy refreshed exhibits that feature early Slate Belt History, from the Lenape to the European settlers like the Beck family, to the waves of European immigrants that found employment in the slate, textile and garment industries. The fire-fighting exhibit features antique apparatus from the Slate Belt’s golden industrial age.

This year they collaborate with the Quarry Hoist Group and Totts Gap Art Institute, which will dedicate the new pavilion for the S. Flory Manufacturing Company Hoist in Bethel Park next door the heritage Center on North First St..

The dedication ceremony starts at 11 am and demonstrations will continue through the afternoon. The Heritage Center (adjacent to Bethel Park) will open from 12 - 3, serve light snacks, and have special displays of Flory Manufacturing material. You’ll be able to view a continuous slide show that highlights the life of the hoist from the quarry to its new home.

The Heritage Center will also unveil the new outdoor signage sponsored by a Northampton County Department of Community and Economic Development Hotel Tax Grant. The NPS standard display signs bring Slate Belt history out of the museum and into downtown Bangor.

The Slate Belt Heritage Center is located in the 1907 Town Hall building at 30 North First Street, Bangor, PA. Founded in 1999, the Center is a not-for-profit- 501 (c) 3 that collects, preserves, interprets and makes public the history, ethnic traditions and industrial heritage of the area. SBHC is open Saturdays and Sundays, noon to 3 PM from mid-April through October and Sundays, November through March, noon - 3PM. Tours and research time can be scheduled by appointment.

Check their Facebook page at Slatebeltheritagecenter-SBHC for program times, events and other news. Contact SBHC at 610-599-4993 or sbhc@frontier.com for further information.

Sustainability Tour

April may be known for Spring but it is also considered "Earth Month"! In partnership with the Slate Belt Chamber and the Green Knight Economic Development Corporation, WM will be hosting a sustainability tour on April 19th at 5:30 PM. The tour will include a visit inside the Green Knight Energy Center in which guests will learn how WM and the Green Knight Economic Development Corporation create electricity from the waste that is disposed in the Grand Central Landfill.

Immediately following this site visit, guests will board a bus to tour the facility. All ages are welcome – but interested guests must register to secure your spot on the bus. (a great opportunity for Scouts and youth groups too!)

Please feel free to share the attached flyer with friends and family. To register, either email myself or Beth at info@slatebeltchamber.org
