Praying for Maya

Our little granddaughter Maya was airlifted to Children's Hospital of Philadelphia earlier with a brain bleed. Our family has been asking for lots of prayers lately. This one's super huge! Put her on a convoy of prayer chains.)

My husband came home last night from his monthly photography club meeting. Walked over to me and secretly handed me the cutest little group of miniature ducks. Right away I thought in my mind , Maya would love one of those. Because she has a fascination for tiny little creatures. Of any nature. And I began to think.

So hence begins my quest from everyone out there seeing this message. Today begins MAYAS Miniature Collect till She's Home. I am asking for a favor from any one of you reading this. Send or drop off a mini of your choice for Maya to give hope and encouragement for her to come home healed. PM me for address . Thank you , God Bless (this mini is about the size of an adults fingernail) but use your own judgement.

The bleeding in her brain has stopped, however she has an infection and won't be home anytime soon.

Please contact Shelly Mensch on Facebook.

Slate Regional Police Dept. Preparing for K9 Addition

They are getting excited to finally meet their newest officer, K9 Zorro. Both he and his handler Officer Lowe, will be returning from their southern training in a few short weeks. They both have been working hard to become one of the best K9 teams in the area.

Now comes the part where we make ever effort to keep him safe. We are currently having a K9 vehicle customized to keep Zorro safe and secure. They are also working on purchasing a K9 VEST for him. Officer Lowe has chosen the patrol vest by K9 Storm which runs close to $3,500. Visit the site below to check it out.

<https://k9storm.com/shop-usd...>

If you, your business or group are interested in contributing to our K9 Officer Zorro's Vest Fund, please follow the link below which will lead you to the SBRPD PayPal donation site.

<https://northampton.crimewatchpa.com/.../content/donate>

Should you wish to contact us regarding a donation to the K9 Program, please contact Pat at Pstonaker@Slatebeltpd.com or 610.759.8517

Remember: Their goal is to keep the costs of the K9 Program, the specialized vehicle, K9 team's training, Zorro's vest and his daily supplies be obtained through our community's donations, and our community has been beyond instrumental in this venture. The support for our new K9 Program has been incredible. We cannot express our appreciation enough.

Quarry Hoist Vital to the Success of the Slate Industry

By Larry Cory

A hoist that was used in the Jackson Slate Quarry in Pen Argyl and was manufactured by S. Flory Manufacturing Co in Bangor circa 1907, found its way to Bethlehem to be a temporary part of the National Museum of Industrial History. The the Jackson Quarry hoist, however, is now in its permanent site next to the Slate Belt Heritage Center.

Thanks to historian Mike Piersa and friend of the Slate Belt Heritage Center, he was a force in bringing the hoist back home.

The Bangor Borough Council approved the use of Bethel Park adjacent to the Slate Belt Heritage center at the corner of Market and First streets as a site for the hoist which was officially dedicated last Saturday.

.Hoists were crucial to the success of mining slate. Quarries are huge holes in the ground and product can only be removed vertically. There are no horizontal shafts where rails can be used for transport.

The Jackson hoist weighs 28,000 pounds and can lift 5-8 tons of slate out of the quarry.

Considering the number of quarries dug in the Bangor-Pen Argyl area, numerous hoists were necessary to quarry Slate. S. Flory manufacturing owned by Solomon Flory on Main Street in Bangor at the site of the current CVS, was conveniently located for local quarry owners. The Flory company made, serviced and repaired the hoists in addition to other quarry machinery.

The company at its productive peak employed over 500 people and sold hoists and other industrial machinery nationwide. It has been estimated that the company made 7,000 machines before going out of business during the Great Depression.

A fire in 1913 at the Flory Company caused damages of $1,000,000 ($20,000,000 in today's money) made news around the country, including a mention in the New York Times.

People unfamiliar with Slate may view the quarry remains in the area as unsightly, but when one considers the success of the Slate Industry and S. Flory Manufacturing, those piles of Slate serve as a vestige of a great era in Slate Belt history.

The display of the Jackson hoist will help keep that memory alive.
