Inhaled Vaccine Now In Clinical Trials

by Katherine Ellen Foley - Health and science reporter qz.com

There are 13 Covid-19 vaccines in use across the globe just a year after the World Health Organization declared the Covid-19 crisis a pandemic. All of them are shots to the upper arm.

These shots, while a critical tool in ending the pandemic, may not reach everyone. Scientists and drug companies are hustling to find more accessible ways to inoculate people—which includes changing vaccines' delivery methods. Globally, there are now several Covid-19 vaccine candidates that could be inhaled, instead of injected.

CanSino Biologics, a Chinese drug company announced earlier this month that it received permission from the National Medical Products Administration (the Chinese drug regulatory authority) to start early clinical trials of an inhaled Covid-19 vaccine.

In the UK, scientists at the University of Oxford are starting early clinical trials to see if an inhaled version of the AstraZeneca vaccine can produce similar immunity as the injected one, while Codagenix, a biotech startup, is beginning its first round of trials on a novel inhaled Covid-19 vaccine candidate. And in the US, the startups Phage Novo Bio and Precision Virologics—which were spun off from researchers at Rutgers University in New Jersey and Washington University at St. Louis, respectively—have shown through animal trials that their inhaled candidates for Covid-19 vaccines were safe and effective. (Precision Virologics is also sharing the rights of its vaccine with Bharat Biologics in India.)

Inhaled vaccines aren't new—they exist for other viruses, like flu. But they're a relatively novel technology arriving on the market in the early 2000s. The Covid-19 pandemic, however, requires the largest mass-vaccination event in history—which means all options need to be on the table for first-round vaccines and any boosters we may need. Inhaled vaccines should be easier to administer, more accessible—and there's reason to believe they could work better, too.

Inhaled vaccines may be the future

Intramuscular injections aren't necessarily the best mode of delivery for vaccines—they're just the most common. Pharmaceutical companies likely chose them for the first vaccine candidates because they're a tried-and-true method of delivering antigens, tiny molecules that jump start the immune system's antibody production, and speed was paramount.

Easter Bunny Coming to Pen Argyl

Lookout Fire Company No.1 is excited to say that this year they will be spreading Easter cheer throughout the borough on Saturday, April 3rd from 11am until roughly 2pm for children ages 10 and under.

As a result of restrictions still in place on Saturday April 3rd, as well as the health and safety of the community as their number one concern, they have opted out of holding our Easter Egg Hunt at Weona Park.

Today, there will be a small group of fire company members who will drive around town in the fire trucks to deliver candy filled Easter bags. They recommend precautions when packaging eggs, you will find that they put them in easy to disinfect baggies if you choose to clean them as well.

They will begin the Easter cheer run at 11am for residents who live west and below route 512 and work our way east through the borough.

When you hear the fire truck, come outside so that they can toss a bag of Easter candy to your children and family. They ask that you remain on your porch or sidewalk in order to keep recommended social distance.

State Food Assistance

Pennsylvania State officials have encouraged all Pennsylvania residents to take full advantage of all food assistance programs, if needed, over the holiday season.

"Pennsylvania's food assistance programs were built for times like these. No one should be too shy to take advantage of the offer," said Russell Redding, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

But those assets haven't stopped the covid-19 pandemic from destabilizing personal finances and causing heightened food insecurity for millions of residents. Compared to 2018, when roughly 11% of adults in Pennsylvania were food insecure, Redding said 15.5% experience the issue this year.

The difference is even starker when it comes to children in the state. In 2018, 15% children experienced food insecurity. That number has climbed to 24% in 2020.

Local food pantries saw greater demand especially early in the pandemic and through the summer, with miles-long lines at each weekly distribution and millions of pounds of food provided.

"Food insecurity was a problem for millions of Americans before March 2020," said Teresa Miller, secretary of the Department of Human Services.

Lookout Fire Co. Will Spreading Easter Cheer

Easter is right around the corner, and Lookout Fire Company No.1 is excited to say that this year they will be spreading Easter cheer throughout the borough on Saturday, April 3rd from 11am until roughly 2pm for children ages 10 and under.

They will be doing this in place of their Easter Egg Hunt. As a result of restrictions still in place on Saturday April 3rd, as well as the health and safety of the community as their number one concern, they have opted out of holding our Easter Egg Hunt at Weona Park.

On Saturday, April 3rd, there will be a small group of fire company members who will be driving around town in the fire trucks to deliver candy filled Easter bags. While they have taken recommended precautions when packaging the eggs, you will find that they put them in easy to disinfect baggies if you choose to clean them as well.

They will begin the Easter cheer run at 11am for residents who live west and below route 512 and work our way east through the borough.

When you hear the fire truck, come outside so that they can toss a bag of Easter candy to your children and family. They ask that you remain on your porch or sidewalk in order to keep recommended social distance.
