The Plight of the One-time Slate Belt Hobos

A Story About Man Helping His Fellow Man

by Larry Cory

Imagine that on a walk through your neighborhood you came upon a series of unusual chalk-like drawings. Kids? Graffiti? What's up with this, you may think.

Nearly a century ago, however, these drawings would have had meaning and would have been a symbolic means of communication among people known as hobos.

Hobos were, and still may be, poor men looking for work. They were not bums or tramps seeking a handout with nothing in return.

Local historian and long-time Bangor resident Donald Jones remembers these cryptic symbols very well.

Jones recalls a time (circa 1931) when he lived on South First Street in Bangor (Rt 191) near what is now known as Bangor Hardware.

He says that trains passing through town would stop near his childhood home. Hobos who had likely hitched a ride in a boxcar would emerge from their borrowed transport to seek food and other favors from local residents in exchange for work.

The hobos, Jones says, would stay somewhere in South Bangor for a while before moving on.

"We lived at 364 South First Street and our's was the first house where they (hobos) would stop and ask for food." Jones said at a recent gathering in Trinity Lutheran Church.

"My mother would never turn anyone down," Jones said. "We were brought up that way. "

Soon there were more people coming around asking for food in exchange for work.

"One day, my father was talking to our neighbor about the hobos," Jones said.

"My neighbor told my father that (more would be coming) and told my father to look on the front sidewalk. So, my dad went out and looked and there were stars and circles in chalk and things all along our sidewalk."

Jones said that his father told him they were symbols telling others (hobos) what to expect.

Hobos had actually formed a loosely organized brotherhood of sorts by drawing signs on sidewalks in front of homes that told others hobos that a particular house was or wasn't a good place to stop. Other symbols may have told of a dog that bites or someone that may come after them with a shot gun or some other weapon.

One symbol signified that children lived at that location. Jones said that hobos would respectfully ignore that home.

"This is a story that you probably never heard before and will never hear again," Jones added. "This is a story about a man helping his fellow man."

 NO USE GOING THIS DIRECTION	 THIS WAY	 HIT THE ROAD! QUICK!	OR	 GOOD ROAD to FOLLOW	 ROAD SPOILED, full of other hobos
 DOUBTFUL	 HALT	 THIS IS THE PLACE	 DANGEROUS NEIGHBORHOOD	 THIS COMMUNITY indifferent to hobos	 NOTHING to be GAINED HERE
 YOU CAN CAMP HERE	 FRESH WATER, SAFE CAMPSITE	 DANGEROUS DRINKING WATER	 O. K., ALL RIGHT	 GOOD PLACE for a HANDOUT	 ILL-TEMPERED MAN LIVES HERE
 WELL-GUARDED HOUSE	OR	 THE OWNER IS IN	 THE OWNER IS OUT	 A GENTLEMAN LIVES HERE	 THESE PEOPLE ARE RICH

Today is.....

Kiss and Make-Up Day

Kiss and Make Up Day is a great way to end a spat. Everyone has an argument, a fight, or a tiff once in a while. Family, friends, lovers, no one escapes without an occasional fight. Today is a day to end the fight, kiss, and make up. Oh, what fun this day can be!

According to Jacqueline V. Milgate, who created this day: "Life is too short to hold a grudge. If someone is important to you, kiss and make up!"

Today is a day to end the fight, be it a short spat, or a long standing feud. C'mon, get over the issues, and resolve your differences. Then, kiss and make up. After all, making up can be oh, so sweet. For lovers, it is the best part of the fight. Some might suggest that the kissing and the making up part makes fighting worthwhile.

BTW: Kiss and Make Up Day might be a good day to send flowers or candy. Or, both!.
