BUFFALO DIGS OUT

(AP) Residents in western New York are digging out after a massive winter storm passed through the region, dropping more than 6 feet of snow in some areas.

The city of Buffalo set a record for daily snowfall, with 16.1 inches by Saturday morning. The previous record was 7.6 inches.

The National Weather Service tweeted Sunday morning that the “heavy snow is (finally) done in the Buffalo metro area, but there will be areas of blowing snow today.” NPR member station WBFO reports some winter weather advisories remain in place until 10 p.m. ET.

The NWS said the heaviest lake-effect snows will come off of Lake Ontario into Sunday night, with some snowfall rates of 3 inches per hour.

Gov. Kathy Hochul on Saturday called the storm “one for the record books.” She said the state would submit an emergency declaration request to get support from the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

This Day In History

Radio City Music Hall opens

At the height of the Great Depression, thousands turn out for the opening of Radio City Music Hall, a magnificent Art Deco theater in New York City. Radio City Music Hall was designed as a palace for the people, a place of beauty where ordinary people could see high-quality entertainment. Since its 1932 opening, more than 300 million people have gone to Radio City to enjoy movies, stage shows, concerts and special events.

Radio City Music Hall was the brainchild of the billionaire John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who decided to make the theater the cornerstone of the Rockefeller Complex he was building in a formerly derelict neighborhood in midtown Manhattan. The theater was built in partnership with the Radio Corporation of America (RCA) and designed by Donald Deskey. The result was an Art Deco masterpiece of elegance and grace constructed out of a diverse variety of materials, including aluminum, gold foil, marble, permatex, glass, and cork.

Average American Loses Over Two Hours Sleep Per Day During The Holidays

Thinking of hosting friends and family overnight this holiday season? Think twice before inviting out-of-towners to stay with you.

A survey of 2,000 Americans (split evenly by generation) found that those hosting friends and family during the holidays lose two and a half hours of sleep per day when preparing to have others in their home. Of all the generations, Gen Z are the most likely to lose at least four hours of sleep per day when prepping for guests.

Usually, 32% of respondents said they're both hosts and guests at some point during the holiday season, while one in six only host people (17%) and 18% only stay as guests.

Commissioned by Serta Simmons Bedding and conducted by OnePoll, results showed that Gen Z respondents are most likely to host guests (22%), while millennials are among the top to stay over as guests.

For anyone who wants to ensure that they are not overstaying their welcome, 49% of people think spending four days or more is too many. Guests seem to be mindful of this unspoken rule. When hosting others, 79% of respondents said their guests stay four nights or less.

As guests, Gen Z (70%) and baby boomers (85%) aren't shy – when staying with their partner at their family's home, they're less likely to feel awkward about sleeping in the same bed compared to Gen X (30%) and millennials (31%).

No matter how long people spend visiting their loved ones during the festive season, results found it can affect respondents' sleep in various ways.

Those who are guests during the holidays reported that their sleep schedule was disrupted — 75% said they feel compelled to go to sleep and wake up at the same time as their host.

This was especially true for younger guests: 83% of Gen Z guests match their hosts' sleep schedule, compared to only 61% of baby boomer guests.
