Scientists Say One of Saturn's Moons Could Contain Life

By Alice Clifford via SWNS

Saturn's sixth largest moon, Enceladus, could contain life, a new study reveals.

Scientists have found that Enceladus' ocean is likely rich in phosphorus, a key component for life.

Phosphorus, in the form of phosphates, is essential for the creation of DNA and RNA, energy-carrying molecules, cell membranes, bones and teeth in people and animals, and even the sea's microbiome of plankton.

"Enceladus is one of the prime targets in humanity's search for life in our solar system," said Dr. Christopher Glein, a leading expert in extraterrestrial oceanography at Southwest Research Institute, and member of the team.

"In the years since NASA's Cassini spacecraft visited the Saturn system, we have been repeatedly blown away by the discoveries made possible by the collected data."

The Cassini spacecraft discovered water under the moon's icy surface, opening up the idea that it could sustain life.

Scientists are now going beyond water and looking for specific molecules that can support life.

"The quest for extraterrestrial habitability in the solar system has shifted focus, as we now look for the building blocks for life, including organic molecules, ammonia, sulphur-bearing compounds as well as the chemical energy needed to support life," Glein said.

"Phosphorus presents an interesting case because previous work suggested that it might be scarce in the ocean of Enceladus, which would dim the prospects for life."

Glein added: "What we have learned is that the plume contains almost all the basic requirements of life as we know it."

Haunted Heritage Program

The Slate Belt Heritage Center will again host its' Haunted Heritage Program (with a nod to the Queen) entitled: "Crowning of the Ghosts". This much loved yearly program will be held on Thursday, October 13, 7:00 PM. Slate Belt residents from the past will appear in ghostly form to tell true stories from their lives. This the Center conjures up the spirits of : Ghost #1, Max Winkler (1886-1955) immigrant, industrialist and benefactor, who is best known as the founder of Blue Ridge-Winkler Textiles; William D. "Bill" Scott, Jr. textile executive, mayor of Bangor and urban renewal visionary; Charlotte Hough (1924-1997), first female president and member of the Bangor Area School Board, promoter of libraries, senior housing and the arts. A few other ghosts may drift in during the program. As a small tribute to the late Queen Elizabeth, tiara or crowns may be worn by all attendees.

The Slate Belt Heritage Center is located at 30 North 1st Street, Bangor, PA. Tickets can be purchased for $10.00 at Bray's News Stand, on Broadway, Bangor. All proceeds, from the program, support Slate Belt Heritages Centers' mission to collect, preserve, interpret and present the history, culture and heritage of the area. Refreshments will be served. ## Girl Scouts Learn About Government and Democracy

by Larry Cory

Understanding government and democracy is not always easy for people of all ages.

In fact, according to a study done by the University of Pennsylvania a few years ago, only one out of four Americans could name all three branches of the federal government.

Local Girl Scout leader, Jamie Goffredo is hoping to make that chore a bit easier by encouraging her troop members to earn their democracy badges. She brought three troops recently to Roseto Ball Park: a troop of daisies, which consists of first graders, a troop of brownies, which consists of second graders, and a troop of juniors which consists of fourth graders to participate in group discussions with local government officials.

This project, "is an overview of local government, state government, (the) country's legislative branch, executive branch and the judicial branch," Goffredo said. "So, by the time they are finished, they'll know more about how government works, including government within their town or city and the whole country."

Among the officials invited to participate, Goffredo asked Roseto Mayor Eileen Tillman and former Legislative Fellow in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives Bill Hutcheson, to speak to the children.

Tillman told the girls about her job as mayor and how borough council works in addition to other services provided by the borough.

"You also have garbage collection," the Mayor said. "(What) would it be like if all of your garbage stayed at your house. So, it's our job to make sure that we have people that will come every week ... So those are things that our town makes sure that we do that benefits you. This is how a democracy works."

"I thought it was really interesting," Mayor Tillman said of her experience with scouts. "... I think it's good because too often I think people wait till they become the adult and then they finally realize what government is about, and all those years that I wasted because I just kind of blew it off. It's really good to get the understanding now, instead of waiting (until) you're 30 years old, it's almost too late."

Chamber of Commerce Announces Annual Awards

Business Person of the Year Kimberly Stocker, Blue Flame Events

Kim received several nominations this year from vendors that have booths at Blue Flame Events and commend her friendly, professional manner, in addition to hard-working ethic and excellent customer service. Events are well planned and Kim celebrates the success of vendors. The events contribute not only financially to the venues and vendors, but Kim holds community-based donation events to support local nonprofit organizations, such as Slate Belt Rising. As a local resident and business owner Kim is a great example of a community-minded person.

Volunteer of the Year Perry Morris

Perry has been involved in Scouting for 30+ years and has served as a Cub/Scout Master, Committee Chairman, Eagle Board of Review, District Commissioner, District Chaplain, and Outdoor Leader Trainer. He taught various merit badges and assisted with Fall/Spring Camporees. He taught Native American Culture and Hiking Historic Trails. Perry has received various scouting awards including: Commissioner Award, Silver Beaver, and Legion of Honor of the Four Chaplains. In addition to scouting, Perry has volunteered his time for 15 years at the Slate Belt Heritage Center, where he is in charge of property. He uses his storytelling talent to participate in the annual Haunted Heritage Program and Lehigh Valley Passport to History Program. Perry is the epitome of what it is to be a volunteer in the community and the Slate Belt would be a loss without people like him donating time and talents.

The awards will be presented at an Awards Dinner on Thursday, November 10, 2022 at 6:00pm at Richmond Farm & Brewery. Registration information can be found on the Chamber website: www.slatebeltchamber.org
