National Double Cheeseburger Day

www.NationalDayCalendar.com

One of America's favorites, National Double Cheeseburger Day recognizes a food icon savored across the United States.

Hamburger. Seasoned ground beef, grilled and placed between two slices of bread or a bun. Top with sauteed onions, peppers, pickles, sliced onions, and cheese. Add condiments such as ketchup, mustard, or mayo. Any one of these combinations would create a modern American version a hamburger.

Now, double the patties and the cheese. The celebration requires it.

While the day is about the double cheeseburger, that doesn't mean you can't add your favorite toppings. When it comes to adding some tanginess to a burger, a few ingredients never fail. Goat cheese brightens a burger every time. But if you're looking for a crispness, too, add some creamy coleslaw instead. Another option in this category is the reliable tartar sauce.

If you like to bring the heat, you can look to your cheeses. Pepper jack is a mild way of adding some spice. However, if you prefer to test the limits, fresh sliced jalapenos or habaneros will also do the trick.

It is most likely that the hamburger sandwich first appeared in the 19th or early 20th centuries, but there is much controversy over its origin. Over the years, the hamburger has become a culinary icon in the United States.

And Americans love their burgers! Restaurants dedicated to making them just right have been in business for generations. Even those who refrain from red meat don't hesitate to find a way to enjoy a juicy burger. Whether the burger is charbroiled, grilled or barely kisses the heat, there's a flavor for you.

Some Amish Have Started to Use Electricity

The Amish indeed shun all forms of modern technology such as electricity, however, in recent years many of the Amish communities have unanimously voted to bring in emergency use of electricity. Amish ban electricity and other modern forms of technology due to their belief in 'Gelassenheit', a German word that can be translated to 'letting be'. This belief system prescribes all members of the Amish community to use the earth as God originally intended in their scriptures.

Heritage Center Program

The Slate Belt Heritage Center will be having an in-person talk on Thursday, September 23 at 7:00 in the Council Chamber at the Center. Todd Kneebone, a former Bangor resident, recently returned from a trip to Wales and Cornwall, where he connected with his ancestors and the heritage of his hometown. What attracted settlers from Cornwall, in southern England, to the Slate Belt?

Was Bangor, Wales and the surrounding area really the slate capital of the world? And why is there such a thick rim of crust on Cornish pasties? Todd's presentation will answer these questions, and more, to help us connect with the past. Masks are required for everyone who attends the presentation and social distancing will be observed.
