Ophelia Hanging Around For Another Day

According to the NWS "Another dreary day is expected across the region as the remnants of Ophelia continue to spin through the region early this morning before moving offshore. Latest observations place the low to the southeast of Philadelphia, in South Jersey. Areas of rain and drizzle continue to pivot around the low, mainly on the northern side with the heaviest rain just to the north of our region across northeastern PA and southern NY".

Total Slate Belt Rainfall From Ophelia at 8:30am was 2.71 inches
